

CORNS AND CALLUSES

The body protects the foot from external pressure by thickening the skin where it is stressed. When poorly fitting shoes or tight socks rub toes, the result is a bump of skin called a corn. Calluses form on the sole, sometimes because a person's gait constantly brings weight down on the wrong part of the foot.